The Southern negro today is, in many respects worthy of the greatest praise, and deserves the best and most benevolent consideration from the whites. He is faithful, affectionate and tractable, but is wholly a creature of impulse. He never acts from principle. He seems to be entirely incapable of reasoning out and formulating a moral maxim and making it the basis of any course of action, and for this reason he seems thoroughly incapable of self-government, and therefore does not rise above the social status of a ward or a child that demands the restraints, direction and protection of superior wisdom. Being entirely devoid of principle there is nothing in his nature upon which to found the loftiest sentiments of honor and chastity, and wherever these superior qualities are found, as they are in the mixed bloods, they must be invariably attributed to the superior element.—New Orleans Picayune.

Is the reason people will not, can not or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap Indian houses or irresponsible parties at "comic" festivals, rather than take a medicine of world-wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world beguiling such unparalleled satisfaction to Deeg's Blood Purifier and Blood-Maker, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing. A R. Penny, druggist.

After his college at Austin, Texas, W. M. Weber went to Knoxville, Wednesday, 4 B Vowels, of the Signal, has been down on some days with rheumatism. She sought at us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night, and with one bottle she had been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. L. J. Butler-Lane.' Thus wrote W. C. Hammond & Co., Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at A. H. Penny's drug store.

SUPPLEMENT.

In a Fit of Anger a Son Remains in a Room For Fourteen Years.

There is no more peculiar family than the Glenns, two sisters and a brother who live in Urbana, Ohio. All are unmarried, and John, the brother, is a study. There was once three boys. The father was odd. He would never go in debt. Once he went to buy the boys a coat each, but his money gave out and he only got two. He told John the circumstances and said he would get him one next time. John got mad, said he need never buy him one, and that he would never wear one so long as his father lived. Going to his room John remained 14 years without a coat, and no one ever saw him out of that room. His meals were sent to him, and he sat there and read and thought.

When the father died John came out, put on a coat and went to the funeral. The Van Wert, O., News says that the Glenns are Scotch-Irish. The coat-of-arms ornaments the silver, china and front door. The old man had money and bought largely of land, and the estate is one of the most valuable in Champaign county. After the father died the children, none of whom ever married, although all had been carefully educated, decided to leave the whole house frescoed. For 10 months an artist worked at the house and the walls are covered with grotesque figures, serpents and animals.

John got mad once about the decorations and shut himself in his room for four years, coming out to attend the funeral of the brother who had provoked him. Mary, the youngest sister, has charge of the finances now. John is 65 years old and bleached white by his confinement. The family are close relatives to Mrs. Thomas Richards, of Stanford.

A good story is told about a man on the East Side who has 12 acres of land to sell. He asked $850 per acre, and finally found a purchaser at that figure. His wife, however, refused to sign the deed, and the sale was off. Then he offered the land for $1,000 an acre, and again a purchaser was found, and again the good wife exercised her royal prerogative and refused to sign the deed. The property is now for sale at $20,000 for the 12 acres. Fortunate is the man who possesses a wife who knows how to refuse to sign deeds judiciously; her value is greater than the rubies; yet, verily, above fine gold. Portland Oregonian.

PARADOXICAL.—Paradoxical as it appears, the most successful miners have worked in vein.

Rogues don't go to church often, but we have seen naves there.

It is hard to believe that Blondin would, in so earnest, walk on "tight" rope.

If you wish to see nothing, shut your eyes and you will see it.

Everything that is up in arms is not a warrior—a baby, for instance.

Though often visited by his nephews, still the pawnbroker is a loan-sun man.

It is the shoemaker that gives his goods away who is a bona fide free booter.

The average dealer's ice is not always what it is cracked up to be.

Isn't it paradoxical that 1:20 o'clock is past 1, while 1:30 o'clock is only half past?

A THICK ANVIL BODY CAN PERFORM.—You take six pieces of paper, place three of them on the back of your hand, and as a preliminary operation, blow them away with an air of mystery, informing your audience at the same time that you are about to explain to them some new kind of magnetism. Then placing the other three pieces on your hand you say: "Which of the three pieces do the company desire shall remain on my hand when I blow on them?" When one has been selected you place the forefinger of your other hand upon it and blow the other pieces away. This absurd performance is a very amusing parlor trick.

Considerable sport is being had out of the horse question. The question is: A man sold a horse for $80, bought him back again for $70, and sold him a second time for $100. What did he make in the transaction? A. The question is a "catch." At the end of the transactions the man was to be debited with $180 and credited with a horse and $70. If the horse was worth more than $100, he lost the equivalent of the excess. If worth less than $100, he made a profit equal to the difference.

A CORDIAL WELCOME.—Visiting Mother-in-law: "How glad I am to see you, my dear daughter."

Daughter-in-law: "I am so glad to see you. It is so kind of you to travel that long distance just to see me. Take off your things. Now that you are here you must not think of leaving us before the first train in the morning."—Texas Siftings.

A good fluid glue, ready at all times for instant use, without any preliminary preparation, is one of the most useful articles of stock with which the workshop can be furnished. To make such a glue all that is necessary is to melt three lbs. of glue in a quart of water, and then drop in an equally small quantity of nitric acid. When this ingredient is added the mixture is removed from the fire and allowed to cool. Glue so prepared has been kept in an open kettle for 3 years and still ready for use on the instant.

For the benefit of those over-economic people who have a way of turning down low the light of the kerosene lamp when leaving a room for a little while, it may be said that experiment demonstrates that the saving in oil by this means is hardly appreciable. With the low flame a considerable quantity of the products of incomplete combustion are making their escape into the air; and these are not only offensive to the sense of smell, but are injurious to the health.

A teacher in a Western town, who asked one of her pupils to procure a grammar, received the following note from the girl's mother: "I do not desire that Mattie shall engage in grammar as I prefer her to engage in more youthful studies and can learn her to speak and write proper myself. I have went through two grammars and can't say as they did me no good—I prefer Mattie to engage in German and drawing and vocal music on the piano."

During our civil war there were, of newspaper record, 8,493 soldiers whose lives were saved by Bibles and Testaments carried in their breast pockets. But now in Spinnville, Ala., a pint of whisky, carried in the breast pocket, stopped the bullet of an angry revolver. That is the kind of whisky they make down there—awful tough.

The word "buddle" is said to be derived from the English word "batted," a bunch or bundle of straw. The word is in common use in the Eastern States in the sense of the whole lot, as "the buddle of them," and from this usage has got to mean the whole pile, or amount of a man's money.

Boothblack (to another boothblack)—"Hello, Jim, where'd yer git yer new box?"

Other b. b.—"Bats!"

Passing Old Maid (with elevated skirts)—"Oh, my gracious, where, where?"

Equal to the Occasion.

They were telling experiences the other night and Colonel Granniss told one of his. He made the trip through the southern country here in t after the road had been opened. The festive cow-boy had just begun to enjoy the sport of running the train in the rough region, and at one of the stations a formidable specimen of that tough human boarded the cars. The conductor came along punching the tickets and this row-boy did not pay any attention to him. At last the conductor laid his hand on the rowboy's shoulder and said, "Ticket, please." The cow-boy turned in true cow-boy style, pulled out his revolver and pointed it at the conductor.

"Here's my ticket!"

The conductor walked on and punched everybody else's coupon. Then he disappeared. The little incident had been forgotten by almost everybody on the car. The cow-boy was in a quiescent state and the car was still when the conductor came in. He walked leisurely up the aisle and suddenly stopped before the cow-boy, placed a big knife dangerously contiguous to his vital part and said, quietly:

"Lemme see that ticket again."

The cow-boy paid his fare.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Forty years ago Kentucky was the greatest corn-producing State, but the development of the West and Northwest has been so rapid and so marvelous that Kentucky is now ninth in the list. Iowa is first, with 278,232,000 bushels; Illinois second, with 278,060,000 bushels, and Missouri third, with 202,583,000 bushels. Even Texas raises more corn than Kentucky and some day will be the largest corn-growing State. In 1888 Texas produced 92,436,000 bushels and Kentucky 81,545,000.

The thought of Heaven is pleasant to us; we believe that some place away above the sky, and clouds, and stars, there is a home into which we shall be gathered. If we feel like wanderers, pilgrims and sojourners, and our travels perhaps almost concluded, it is restful to us to look and contemplate that which awaits us in the better land. It is not that we wish to escape what is here, but, its fashion changing, we hope for the better enjoyments that are beyond. —United Presbyterian.

Dr. Tanner, the starvation-cure freak, once more announces his intention to bury himself alive, and this time adds some equally remarkable specifications concerning his hope of resurrection. "I propose," he says, "to so modify my body and mind that I can take upon myself a protracted trance state, and while in that condition be buried. I shall remain in the grave four weeks, and then be disinterred and resuscitated. Many of the secrets of that performance have revealed themselves to me. One of the principal nets is to throw the tongue back into the gullet and cause a change in the circulation of the blood, so that it resumes the conditions of the pre-natal state and renders the body airtight." If the doctor will consent to swallow his tongue America is apt to feel reconciled to the collateral results of his experiment.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.—Lige—"Mr. President, there is a gentleman in the ante room who says he would like a first class appointment."

The President—"Who was his father?"

Lige—"Nobody in particular I believe."

The President—"Who was his grandfather?"

Lige—"I never heard of him."

The President—"How much did he give to the campaign fund?"

Lige—"His contribution was trifling, I believe."

The President—"Tell him there are no vacancies."—Serving It's Turn.

A New York man has a collection of 100,000 butterflies, each differing from the other in some particular. Can have the faintest conception of the wonderful beauty of many of these most delicate creations of nature. Nothing in art can approach them in delicacy of color or equal their exquisite coloring. The owner, Mr. Neumegen has spent 20 years and $35,000 in making the collection.

In New York City last year there were 40,142 deaths, of which number consumption as usual claimed the largest number, 5,215, and its kindred affection, pneumonia, 4,247. Suicide took away 233 and homicide 53. The firemen were called upon to battle with 3,202 fires which did damage aggregating $1,306,401.

The editor of the Minneapolis Tribune says he can't be fooled about old Kentucky whisky. He says: "This talk about seven-year-old Kentucky whisky is very absurd. If they make whisky in Kentucky April 1 you can bet your socks it's all gone before sunset April 21."

Unfortunate Mishaps That Befell Billiger McSwat and His Bride.

The sun never shone upon a lovelier morning than that which ushered in the wedding day of Billiger McSwat and Lobelia Grubbs.

Far away in the dreamy distance stretched a landscape that seemed to tremble and vibrate in the mellow haze of the golden October day as if the unseen spirits that inhabit the air were beating it with fairy wings in the irrepressible exuberance of overflowing life and joy.

[Copyright. All rights reserved.]

Billiger and Lobelia McSwat had just started on their wedding journey.

Animated by sincere and laudable purpose of affording no indication in their manner, apparel or behavior that they were taking such a trip, Billiger wore a suit of new, black broadcloth, with a lavender necktie, and Lobelia was attired in a silk dress of a delicate line tint, with no conspicuous ornaments except a large solitaire ring on one of the fingers of the left hand and a few orange blossoms modestly and becomingly arranged on her Parisian traveling hat. They sat on the luxurious cushion of a palace car, Billiger's arm resting carelessly on the back of the seat occupied by his lovely bride, and Lobelia leaning toward Billiger in the easy, tender, confiding manner of a mother in Israel going with her aged companion to the Old Settlers' meeting, or the Secretary of a Young Ladies' Society for the Dissemination of Useful Knowledge accompanying an older brother on a shipping expedition.

"Billiger," fluttered the bride, turning her beautiful eyes trustingly to his, "nobody would suspect that we are—that we have just been—that we are on our—do you think?"

"Certainly not, Lobelia," affirmed Billiger, with great positiveness, as he smiled fondly and reassuringly upon her.

"They think we are brother and sister, Billiger, or at least that we are long married."

"Chestnuts!" exclaimed a voice.

The young husband turned fiercely around to see who had spoken.

It was the train boy, an innocent lad of 17 summers, on whose face was a look of such childlike simplicity that Billiger's hasty suspicions were at once allayed.

"Lobelia, my love," he said tenderly, "would you like some chestnuts?"

"If you like, dear," she replied trustingly.

Billiger put his hand into his pocket. Then he put his other hand into his other pocket and his face turned an ashen gray.

"Lobelia!" he said hoarsely, "I—have left my pocketbook, with my money and tickets in my other pocket—in my trousers! Have you any money with you? Quick! Here comes the conductor!"

"I think I have, Billiger," said Lobelia.

She put her hand in her pocket and turned pale.

"Billiger," she exclaimed piteously, "I have left my pocketbook in my other dress!"

The station at which the train stopped was only seven miles from home. Billiger and Lobelia McSwat got out, the ecstatic bridegroom persuaded a grasping, sordid monopolist who kept a livery stable, to accept his watch as security for the hire of a carriage and driver, and Mr. and Mrs. McSwat drove home in pensile silence through the balmy autumn landscape, which the mellowed rays of the golden October sun bathed in a sea of molten glory.

If the story of the first day of Billiger and Lobelia's wedding journey shall serve as a warning to others, it will not have been written by the sorrowing historian in vain.—Chicago Tribune.

Chamber of Commerce Building, Cincinnati, O.

Truly, woman's love is incomprehensible, and there would seem to be absolutely no limit to a wife's devotion. This was most forcibly demonstrated by an incident which occurred at Sing Sing yesterday. Mrs. Bohan, a wife who had both eyes gouged out by her drunken husband, and whose body bore the scars of many a brutal kick and blow, was led to the jail doors that she might console and cheer the brute who had made her life one of mental and physical misery, and who was then lying ill in the prison hospital. Years ago, in a fit of drunken rage, her husband deliberately gouged out one of her eyes, and last summer, in deliberately and in the same manner, he deprived her of the other. Blind for life, helpless and friendless, she perjured herself in court in her efforts to save him from punishment, and now she lies to his prison bedside the moment she hears that he is suffering. Nancy's devotion to Bill Sykes never approached the same height. Bohan is said to have wept yesterday at their meeting, showing that he suffers the agonies of remorse, and that even such a brute as he is possessed of at least a particle of human feeling. And yet no man can find it in his heart to pity such a wretch, whatever his sufferings, mental and physical. Louisville Post.

Mr. R. A. Logsdon, of Cross Roads, in Hart county, while out fox hunting one day last week, discovered his dogs whining around a large tree, which had been blown up by the roots. The tree is a huge, hollow poplar. While trying to discover the cause of the dogs' actions, his attention was attracted by a lot of human bones in the hollow of the tree. Further search revealed an old flint-lock gun and a keg of whisky. The bones were much decayed and much larger than the usual size. The gun was eaten by rust and the stock had rotted so that it fell in pieces. The keg is a strong concern and shows much ingenuity in its construction, the exterior being coated with a substance resembling pitch, and is well preserved. The whisky found in the keg is said to be a most excellent article. Elizabethtown News.

"Thank to woman who had given him a loaf of bread. "Now, if you'll show me the way to the wood shed I'll get the axe and

"Why, you dear old fellow, you must not think of cutting wood, you are too weak."

"Oh, I don't want the axe for that. I just thought that I'd like to cut off a chunk of this bread—if I've got strength enough."—Time
